Back-to-school!

In a nutshell...

"The best way to predict the future is to create it", said management guru Peter Drucker.

Throughout our lives, we encounter a diverse range of experiences that influence our reactions and decision-making. However, an idea remains intangible if we do not develop a strong plan around it. This is where taking initiative becomes essential in shaping our personal journeys.

Opportunities favor the bold.

"Sapere aude" embodies the courage to explore the truth through one's own thinking without blindly relying on existing dogmas. Develop a perfect symbiosis between thought and action to bring about significant change.

Autonomy is a discipline.

Cross the psychological path from dependence to interdependence. Define your initial skills and draw on your past experiences to carry out your work unsupervised.

The world is a clock, and it needs a watchmaker.

The universe follows precise laws. Effective time management involves planning one's time to achieve goals efficiently. Without this skill, timely success can be hindered and personal effectiveness can be impaired.
